I got to know my present PhD supervisor who was a GEMMA teacher, and thanks to her support I was able to obtain the PhD grant 2/22/11 12:48AM View Responses
The ways in which I framed my research proposal and subsequently defended it during my job interview were indebted to gender studies and feminist theory. In the field of philosophy of technology, this was quite an original/unusual way of addressing certain issues. My current PhD supervisor found this insightful and it contributed to my subsequent employment as a full-time PhD candidate. 2/22/11 1:10AM View Responses
GEMMA was instrumental in my getting hired because it gave me international experience, the ability to relate to students with international goals, cross cultural communication skills and a background in coordinating between multiple international universities. 2/22/11 1:32AM View Responses
I think it was very positive for my profile to have a European official postgraduate degree that involved at least two nationally different context and languages, cultures and academic traditions. 2/22/11 2:43AM View Responses
After GEMMA, I also got a degree in comparative social policy from Oxford University. Overall, GEMMA degree gave me a solid theoretical basis for doing research, which I am currently doing. But it was Oxford, where I received training in research design and
